UNIFORM

Bankers to Throw Safeguards Around Their Money

AND PREVENT STEALING.

How the Employes of One First-Class Bank Handle Funds.

CLERKS MUST TAKE A VACATION.

Their Accounts Are Then Examined During Their Absence.

MR. GRANGER OF GUARANTEE CO., TALKS

A scheme is on foot among bank officials of this city to try and adopt a more uniform system of checking their clerks, with a view of throwing greater safeguards around them-In the matter of handling money intrusted to their care. The idea has only been talked of among a few of the higher officials, whose names cannot be given at present. It is very likely that something will be done about the matter within a few days.

To ascertain what precautions some of the leading banks of the city have taken to prevent their employes from stealing money, a reporter of THE DISPATCH called upon Mr. Charles F. Dean, cashier of the Union National Bank, one of the soundest institutions in the country, and interrogated him in regard to the matter. According to Mr. Dean's system, it is almost impossible for an employe to steal money, as the handling of the bank's funds is confined to the fewest possible number of employes. In answer to an inquiry Mr. Dean said: "Every bank in the city has its own way of conducting business, but in banks where the same number of men are employed, the methods are essentially the same. Here, we have the work so divided and systematized that each division is in charge of two men. The books and ac-counts are so arranged that one CANNOT FALSIFY FIGURES, without the other detecting the false entry. In order to do wrong there would necessarily have to be collusion between the two employes.

"We have three tellers, and it is almost impossible for one of them to make a mistake without it being discovered at the end of the day's business. They are the only people allowed access to the cash; the work of the others being so arranged that they do not have to handle it. When money is received from de-positors, it goes into the individual ledger. The accounts are kept by two different bookkeep-ers, who do not even see the money. The en-tries in the individual ledger, are put in the general ledger, and the

TWO BOOKS MUST BALANCE. "The tellers handle the cash and balance it by figures furnished by the general bookkeeper. The individual accounts must agree with the general bookkeeper's balance. There is nothing done here but what is ultimately proven by the two men who verify the work of each ansaction.

"It is a mistake to say that the employes of "It is a mistake to say that the employes of nearly every bank deal in lottery tickets. I have seen that published as coming from a bank employe, but, as far as this institution is concerned. I can say that it is not true. If we knew that any of our employes dealt in lottery tickets or invested in stocks, we should ask them to resign their positions. We believe in removing temptation from them and they cannot then so wrong.

"The first safeguard we throw about the bank is to investigate the character of our em-ployes. That is the foundation of honesty, Once a year, each employe in the bank is com-pelled to take a vacation of at least ten days. his is not done exactly for the purpose of in-This is not done exactly for the purpose of in-vestigating his accounts. I assign some one to take charge of the books of the absent one and if there is anything crooked it can readily be discovered. The employe, who is going away, never knows who will be assigned to look over his books until after he is gone.

"A defalcation in this city is something rare, There are over 60 banks here now and in nearly every case where there was a defalcation, it was in a bank where all the employes had access to the cash. Considering the amount of money handled it is a wonder that the number of defaulters are so few."

Mr. W.;M. Granger, the agent of the North American Guarantee Company, said yester-"I would like to see the banks throw greater safeguards around their employes and make it impossible for them to do any stealing. When you consider the large number of bank em-ployes there are who handle money, and the you consider the large number of hank employes there are who handle money, and the large sums that pass through their hands, it is a wonder to me that there is not more pilfering done. Our company has over 25,000 men bonded. These men handled over a billion of dollars last year, and out of this large amount of money we had to make good only about $100,000. This is a very small loss compared with the large amount handled. "I have also noticed that, like other things, defalcations are contagious. When one turn up in a certain locality they become epidemic and it would be well for Pittsburg hank directors to look out at the present time."

THE WESTERN UNIVERSITY. The Preparatory Course Will be Dropped-Styles for a Building.

A committee of nine people, acting for the Trustees of the Western University, met vesterday afternoon to report upon the matter of a new building, which has been contemplated for some time, on Observatory Hill. The important thing brought up by the committee was their visit to similar institutions in other cities, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other places, and the improved plans of all were submitted; also the style of the architecture intended.

One of the principal questions which has been agitated in the institution for some time is the reorganization, that is, the separation of the preparatory department from the collegiate, and establishing a distinctive and single course, the same as at large colleges. The matters were submitted and favorably considered by the Trustage, which now accurate Allegians. ered by the Trustees, which now assures Alle

The officials representing the Western system expressed their pleasure at the work their men had done. A recapitulation of the work done by the volunteers between Sang Hollow and the viaduct, the portion of the line which the regular Pennsylvania Railroad forces were unable to reach, shows that nearly 32,000 feet of the trestle work (48,000 feet single) and about 38,000 feet of track, requiring some heavy gradings, were constructed in 11 days. MADE THINGS LIVELY

An Extraordinary Scene in the Central Hotel Yesterday Afternoon.

A PROFESSIONAL MAN'S REVENGE.

He Attacks a Business Man and Chases Him Out to the Street.

WOMAN 18 MIXED UP IN THE AFFAIR

A sensation was created in the lobby of the Central Hotel yesterday afternoon by the ap-pearance of a hatless individual who did not take time to come from the second floor in the elevator, but rushed down the stairs as if he had been shot from a catapult. In his eagerness to get to the first floor he came down par of the way on his back. Upon alighting at the bottom, he hurriedly picked himself up and rushed into the writing room, apparently with the intention of jumping through one of the windows leading to Smithfield street. The windows being closed, he rushed back to the entrance and started out the corridor to the Proprietors Anderson and Rowan and several of the clerks tried to grab him as he passed out, but the man was not to be stopped, and tore himself away. He explained that a man tried to murder him, and rushed out into the street. He was bleeding from a large gash in the back of his head.

Closely following him was a well-drawad but. Closely following him was a well-dressed but flushed individual, wearing gold-rimmed glasses, who also came down the stairs four of a time

HE HAD A WEAPON. He carried in his hand the fragment of broken stone cuspidor, and excitedly yelled "Where is the villain?" "The dirty scoun drel!" "I will kill him!" He immediately b gan searching through the lower part of the house for the first man, but the latter was doing business elsewhere at that time. The pro prietors of the hotel, who had by this time be ome alarmed, and thinking that a crime was to be committed, tried to stop this man also. The latter shook them off as if they were children, and began to retrace hissteps back to the second floor.

It was then found that the first person was a well-known business man and resident of Mc-Keesport, and the other was a well-known pro-fessional man residing in the upper part of A WARNING LETTER. Early in the day the latter gentleman received word that his wife was to meet the other man by appointment at the Central Hotel between 2 and 3 o'clock. He put a detective on her track, and the wife was followed to the hotel. The detective notified the husband, who appeared at the hotel and asked for the couple. Learning that they were in the ladies' parlor, he took the elevator and went up. Upon being shown into the parlor the man saw his wife in earnest conversation with the man she was to meet. The pair were enjoying themselves when the husband rushed into the room.

The balance of the story was told by one of When the husband noticed the man with his wife, he rushed upon the latter, and seizing an ambrella, smashed it over the man's head. The hat of the man who had ran away was found lying on the floor, and inside, printed upon a piece of paper, was his name. The husband took the hat, but afterward turned it over to the hotel people. About an hour after the row the man called for it.

"The woman in the case is only about 23 years of age while her husband is over 30. They have been married but a year and a haif. The wife belongs in Allegheny while her husband came from a point within 100 miles of Pittsburg."

MERELY A BUSINESS MATTER When the McKeesport man returned for his hat, he stated that he had known the woman for a number of years and had met her on a train coming to Pittsburg. She had some business for him to transact and proposed going to the Central Hotel to do it. They were discussing the business when the husband points the room.

The man's statements are denied by the party quoted above, who states that the pair met for the first time on a Baltimore and Ohio excursion train to Johnstown last Tuesday week. They spent the day together in Johnstown and corresponded since. The man proposed the appointment and the woman kept it.

After the row the husband visited the office of Mayor McCallin, and asked him what he could do about the matter. The Mayor replied that he did not have any proof of any criminality, and therefore nothing could be done. As he cannot obtain a divorce from his wife, the husband will propose a separation. the husband will propose a separation. The wife left the Central Hotel after her husband's disappearance and went to her home in Allegheny. She is a very small woman, petite in form and rather good looking. She is a brunette and has always borne a good reputation until this time. She did not express any repentance of her action to her husband.

The Frohsinn Singing Society opened their new club house at 305 Penn avenue last night with a grand concert, banquet and ball.

The affair was entirely exclusive, none but the members, their families and friends being admitted. "Let it be a family housewarming," was the decree of the Executive Committee, and a family bousewarming it was, such as can only be gotten up by a society of people who know how to appreciate good fellowship, so-ciability and general enjoyment all around Nothing was lacking, and in every particular the men who had charge of the arrangements for the evening's entertainment deserved all the credit which they so richly obtained.

It was not until 9 o'clock that the guests began to arrive, but then they all came in a began to arrive, but then they all came in a rush, and soon the rooms were filled with an admiring assembly of ladies and gentlemen, who went around the rooms passing comments and expressing general satisfaction with everything they saw.

Through the kindness of Mr. G. W. Back-ofen, the Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, a DISPATCH representative obtained access and Mr. Backofen showed him personally over the building From a causal tailed access and Mr. Backofen showed him personally over the building. From a casual observation of the entire arrangements of the new club house it was easy to determine that the house affords all accommodations, commodities and advantages of any first-class resort where people might wish to come to to find recreation, recuperation and perfect forgetfulness from a day of hard work and business troubless.

A DETAILED DESCRIPTION. In the basement is a well-furnished kitcher a very large dining hall and a bowling alley. On the first floor are the ladies' quarters which part is a thorough departure and a noveity from ordinary American club life, but withal it is essentially German. The ladies' withal it is essentially German. The ladies' quarters are the most sumptuous and elegantly furnished in the entire building, and the ladies' auxiliary of the Frohsinn Society paid all the expenses incurred for the beautification of these rooms. All the furniture is of antique oak and the other adornments are in accordance with the general style. A beautiful plano from Scheet's factory of Cassel, Germany, and obtained through Mr. F. Bechtel, of this city, attracted great attention lust night. In the rear of the ladies' quarters is the club hall, where concerts, dances and theatricals will be held to delight the members. On the second floor are the reading room, office and white held to delight the members. On the second floor are the reading room, office and general reception parlor for the gentlemen. Above these apartments is a large billiard hall with four tables, and behind that a card room. The janitor's rooms are on the top floor. The building has electric light fittings throughout, and carpets, as well as other appurtenances of a well furnished club house, were noticed everywhere.

THE FUN LAST NIGHT. There were abut 200 ladies and gentlemen as sembled in the club hall last night when the Coerge orchestra, under the personal direction of Mr. Fred Toerge, played the festival over ture. Then the President of the club stepped forward and introduced Mr. Nickolas Rauber as the orator of the evening. The speaker made a very nice opening address, in which he reviewed the history of the society since its organization 49 years ago until the present time. He spoke of the great credit the ladies deserved for the interest they had taken in the welfare of the club and emphasized the fact that it was only their due, that they should have a place in the club for the future. The speaker was followed by the rendition of a chorus sung by the members of the club, under the direction of Prof. Lohmann. About 10 o'clock all adjourned to the dising hall where a beautiful banquet was spread for the guests.

All the rooms were exquisitely decorated last night with the rarest exotics and tropical plants. In the ladies' parlors handsome ferns, istanias, palms and lilles adorned the walls all around, and potted plants were placed in every corner. The hall was gorgeously garianded with natural flowers, and over the stage hung a heavy sign of "Welcome" in double red lettering. Rauber as the orator of the evening. The

DEATH BY ELECTRICITY.

A Test to be Made of the Constitutionality of New York's Law. ecial Telegram to The Dispatch.

BUFFALO, June 26.-Referee Tracy C. Becker said to-day that he would begin to take testimony about July 8 in the Kemmer murder case to find out whether death by electricity is cruel and inhuman. Attorney General Tabor, District Attorney Quinby and Charles S. Hatch, counsel for Kemmler, are quoted as Hatch, counsel for Kemmler, are quoted as saying that if the electric law is declared unconstitutional the repeal of the hanging law will be void, thus restoring to the statute books the hanging penalty. All agree that if Kemmler escapes death by electricity he must hang, Other lawyers say that the repeal of the section would not be unconstitutional, and that New York would have no death penalty without a new law.
